Nevada County Grown

Nevada County Grown (NCG) is pleased to bring you the 2012 Farm Guide, representing the abundance and variety of agricultural products available in our county. The Farm Guide is one of the ways NCG fulfills its mission to promote local agriculture and spread community awareness of our county-grown products. Both residents and visitors use the Farm Guide to find farmers markets, produce stands, farm stores and CSAs plus retail stores and restaurants that offer county-grown agricultural products.

Agriculture is growing in Nevada County. We have farms and ranches that have been in the same family for generations, we have people escaping city life to live closer to the earth, and it is reassuring to see young people choosing to farm. People who live in or visit Nevada County benefit in several ways:

- We have access to fresh, flavorful food that has been raised by our neighbors and has not been on a truck for several days or subjected to the chemicals of large agri-business. If you have questions, you can actually talk to the people who grew it!
- Our farmers and ranchers are conscientious stewards of the land, working in harmony with our sometimes-challenging geography to maintain or improve the land for future generations.
- Farms and ranches are preserving open space, which is essential to the beauty and ambience that is part of our county's character.

Nevada County Grown is a non-profit, tax-exempt marketing organization for the benefit of agriculture. Our Membership and Board of Directors are comprised of both Agricultural Producers and Community-at-large members. If you are an Ag Producer in Nevada County or if you want to support the continued growth of agriculture, we invite you to join NCG by visiting our website at www.NevadaCountyGrown.org

- Joan Clappier, President of the Board of Directors, Nevada County Grown

Local Food Coalition

"Working together to support local farmers, preserve local farms and farmland, and ensure a local food supply in the western Nevada County area."

The Local Food Coalition is an informal network of agricultural organizations and agencies, farmers and ranchers, community non-profits, businesses, and individuals that began in 2006. The purpose is to facilitate communication and collaboration among all the sectors of our community that care about local agriculture and local food production. The means of communication are an e-mail list and a website, plus meetings and personal communication.

To learn more about the Local Food Coalition, how to get involved in the local food movement, or to join the e-mail list, visit the website www.localfoodcoalition.org.

iPhone Farm Guide App

This is your mobile guide to local food in Nevada County. It's the easy way to find local, farm-fresh foods and other farm products. Covers 11 areas around Nevada City and Grass Valley with maps of local farms and farm outlets. The guide shows you the local sources for 21 product categories from Alpacas and Beef to Wine and Wool. Look up farms by name, product or area. Like to shop at farm stands or farmers markets? They are all in the Farm Guide. Everything you need to know about local Nevada County farms, their products, and their outlets is in the Farm Guide.

The Farm Guide App is not an ebook version of the printed farm guide. The App is a cross-indexed searchable guide to farms, farm products, and farm outlets. For example, tap on "Products" then "Eggs" to instantly see the farms that sell eggs and how to contact them. You can call them directly from the App or visit their web site. It's all there at your fingertips -- the mobile guide to local food.

And it's free!

GLOSSARY OF TERMS

One of the best aspects of buying from your local farmers is the opportunity you have to talk with them, learn about the farming practices they use, and why. When you know who grows your food, and how it is grown, you are experiencing true food security!

The following is given to help you understand the terms that are used in this Farm Guide.

Direct Marketing/Direct Sales: In direct marketing the producer sells directly to the customer, thereby receiving 100% of the customer's dollar. Common types of direct marketing include CSA subscriptions, farmers markets, and farm stands and wineries open to the public. These specific types of direct marketing are identified throughout the Guide.

Other types of direct marketing are operations that are open by appointment only, and those that sell directly to customers by phone, e-mail, or mail. In this Guide, these are described as direct sales.

Organic: The USDA determines organic standards and practices through the National Organic Program. This is the USDA definition of organic: "Organic food is produced using sustainable agricultural production practices. Not permitted are most conventional pesticides; fertilizers made with synthetic ingredients, or sewage sludge; bioengineering; or ionizing radiation. Organic meat, poultry eggs, and dairy products come from animals that are given no antibiotics or growth hormones." www.ams.usda.gov

Certified Organic Producer: These farms are inspected, documented, and certified to be following organic practices by a third party organization such as CCOF (California Certified Organic Farmers.) www.ccof.org

Registered Organic Producer: A farm is allowed under USDA rules to sell as organic without being certified if they sell less than $5000 in product annually. There is no third party verification for this status.

Farmers who use conventional (non-organic) pesticides are regulated by federal and state laws and county ordinances. The use of pesticides is overseen by the county Agricultural Commissioner. Producers are licensed to apply and permitted to use certain materials that are restricted. Pesticides, whether organic or non-organic, are generally applied to crops by spraying and by dry application.

Sustainable: The basic definition refers to farming land in a way that does not deplete the natural resource, but continues to maintain it in a way that will allow it to be productive indefinitely. However, there are no standards or definitions of what that means in actual practice.

Biodynamics is a farming method that originated in Europe in the 1920's. It has many aspects, but at the heart of every biodynamic farm is the understanding that the natural world is dynamic and has a spiritual aspect. These dynamic forces at times are impossible to perceive, however, aligning with natural rhythms (for example the cycles of the moon, or contraction and expansion) allows the practitioner to utilize these great forces in nature. The result is food that is grown using materials already on the farm, and that relies on the wisdom of compost and herbal remedies.
www.demeter.net

Certified Farmers/Growers Markets: Markets organized specifically to connect producers directly with customers. The markets are certified by the state through the county Agricultural Commissioner. A certified market means only certified agricultural producers are allowed to sell there. Markets are organized by individuals or groups, usually producers.

Certified Agricultural Producer: Producers who sell at Certified Farmers/Growers Markets must be certified by the state through the county Agricultural Commissioner, in compliance with the Direct Marketing Act of 1977. This is to ensure that the products they sell were grown by them. It is not a requirement that applies to producers selling by other means.

Being a certified market or certified agricultural producer does NOT mean products are certified organic. Also, it does NOT mean that products are produced in the local county or area.

Certified Naturally Grown: These farms are inspected, documented and certified to be following Certified Naturally Grown's growing and program requirements. Farmers producing under this certification are not certified organic. www.naturallygrown.org

COMMUNITY SUPPORTED AGRICULTURE

Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) is an arrangement between individual farms and community members. It is a direct way to support your local farmers. In return, you receive fresh, healthy, seasonal food and the satisfaction of knowing you are truly making a difference!

CSA members invest in the farm at the beginning of the season, when funds are most needed, by purchasing a subscription. Then throughout the season, they receive a weekly box of produce or other goods. Many farms offer opportunities for you to become involved in the farm in other ways, like participating in harvesting. Contact the farms to get more information.
